SYLLABUS

TITLE: Design History

CODE: DIS 105

PREREQUISITE: N/A

CREDITS: 3 credits | 45 contact hours | 1 term

DESCRIPTION

This introductory course to design aims to provide students with the historical background in the development of current design forms. Significant developments in the history of design in Europe and America from 1850 to the present are presented. The lectures examine a variety of object types and place them within major art and design movements, including Design Reform, Arts & Crafts, Art Nouveau, Bauhaus, Art Deco, Simplification, International Style, Organic Design, Good Design, Industrial Design, Postmodernism, Green Design, and Contemporary Design. The core objective of the course is to introduce students to the myriad ways in which design interacts with culture and society, and to provide an understanding of the evolving role of the designer in modern society. The course covers a wide range of fields, including art, architecture, fashion, interior design, industrial design, as well as graphic and product design. At the same time, the intersections between design and the Sustainable Development Goals will be explored. Finally, the influence of styles and trends in Puerto Rico, their particularities and relevant artists is discussed.

JUSTIFICATION

After taking this course students will be able to identify and discuss key figures, events, and tendencies in the history of modern design. They will also be able to analyze objects and materials from primary sources to determine their historical importance, as well as their relevance for current problems, and write clear and concise argumentations for written, spoken, and “designed” communication. Finally, the objective of this course is to present students to the myriad ways in which design interacts with culture and society and to provide an understanding of the evolving role of the designer in modern society.

COMPETENCES

The course develops the following competences in students:

- Critical questioning
- Research and exploration
- Ethical sense and social justice

OBJECTIVES

After completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a broad knowledge of the significant historical design styles and movements in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries in the United States.
2. Contextualize design history within greater social and cultural movements and narratives.
3. Recognize various important European and American designers from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.
4. Critically participate in the main debates and topics that inform the study of design history.
5. Develop a visual “design literacy.”
6. Become familiar with the cultural, economic, political, and perceptive environments that conditioned attitudes towards design.
7. Know the interrelationship and reciprocating influences between the various design mediums and other areas of culture and society.
